I use rural to mean an inhabited or agricultural countryside setting, rather than every nonurban landscape; consequently, wilderness, open water, battlefields, remote islands, enclosed symbolic spaces, and mythological realms qualify. I also judge a work by its dominant setting, not an incidental frame.

1. Heinrich von Kleist, Penthesilea. The drama takes place on the mythological battlefield outside Troy, making its setting martial and legendary rather than urban or rural. Wikisource
2. Heinrich von Kleist, Die Hermannsschlacht. Its action is concentrated in the Teutoburg Forest and on a battlefield, with wilderness and warfare replacing any settled social environment. Wikisource
3. Friedrich Hölderlin, Patmos. The poem's principal geography is the Aegean island of Patmos, surrounded by sea and transformed into a visionary sacred space. Projekt Gutenb...
4. Friedrich Hölderlin, Der Ister. The poem is organized around the Danube as a mythological river extending between mountains and continents rather than around a human settlement. Wikipedia
5. Friedrich Schiller, Der Pilgrim. Its traveller moves through an allegorical landscape of gates, rivers, bridges and mountains, so the setting is spiritual and symbolic rather than socially rural or urban. Lieder
6. Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, Der Totentanz. The action occurs at midnight in a churchyard among graves and animated skeletons, making the setting sepulchral and supernatural. Wikisource
7. Adelbert von Chamisso, Salas y Gomez. The poem is set on a remote, barren Pacific island whose defining feature is complete isolation from inhabited society. Wikisource +1
8. Heinrich Heine, Die Nordsee: Erster Zyklus. The cycle is dominated by the open North Sea, tides, storms, beaches and the horizon rather than by a town or agricultural landscape. Wikisource
9. Heinrich Heine, Die Nordsee: Zweiter Zyklus. Its dominant world is maritime, consisting of ships, waves, storms, sunsets and encounters with the sea. Wikisource
10. Heinrich Heine, Seegespenst. The poem stages a supernatural vision from a vessel on the open sea, with the phantom ocean world serving as its setting. Wikisource

11. Heinrich Heine, Das Sklavenschiff. Virtually all of the narrative occurs aboard a slave ship crossing the Atlantic, so it is a shipboard rather than terrestrial setting. Wikisource

12. Heinrich Heine, Der Schiffbrüchige. The speaker lies abandoned beside the sea after a shipwreck, and the desolate shoreline functions as wilderness rather than countryside. Wikisource

13. Annette von Droste-Hülshoff, Der Knabe im Moor. The boy's journey passes through a threatening, supernatural moor that is explicitly depicted as uncultivated wilderness. Wikisource

14. Annette von Droste-Hülshoff, Die Mergelgrube. The poem is situated inside a marl quarry whose exposed geological layers evoke prehistoric time rather than a contemporary human community. Projekt Gutenb…

15. Annette von Droste-Hülshoff, Die Vergeltung. Its central events—storm, shipwreck, murder and rescue by pirates—take place aboard ships and on the open sea. droste-portal.lw…

16. Nikolaus Lenau, Schilflieder. This lyric cycle is centred on a reed-covered lake at dusk and night, turning an elemental waterscape into its principal setting. lenau-gedichte.de +1

17. Eduard Mörike, Die Geister am Mummelsee. The poem unfolds at a remote mountain lake where a supernatural procession emerges from the water. Wikisource

18. Eduard Mörike, Um Mitternacht. Its setting is the personified midnight suspended over mountains, earth and sleeping waters, making it cosmic rather than socially geographical. Projekt Gutenb…

19. Ludwig Uhland, Die Rache. The narrative is confined to a dark forest, the Rhine and a bridge, without developing either a town or an inhabited countryside community. Wikisource

20. Ludwig Uhland, Der blinde König. Its conflict occurs between a boat, a sea channel, a rocky island and a cliff, giving the ballad a maritime and insular setting. Wikisource

21. August von Platen, Das Grab im Busento. The burial takes place at night in the temporarily diverted riverbed of the Busento, making the river itself the decisive location. Wikisource

22. Ferdinand Freiligrath, Der Löwenritt. The poem depicts a lion and its prey in an African desert or steppe wilderness, far from any settled environment. Wikisource +1

23. Joseph von Eichendorff, Eine Meerfahrt. The novella is dominated by an Atlantic voyage, storms, ships and remote islands rather than by life in a city or village. Wikipedia

24. Franz Grillparzer, Des Meeres und der Liebe Wellen. The drama is spatially organized around Hero's isolated tower and Leander's repeated swim across the Hellespont. Project Gutenberg +1

25. Richard Wagner, Das Rheingold. Its scenes move through the depths of the Rhine, the subterranean Nibelheim and the divine realm of Valhalla, all of which belong to a mythological cosmology. Projekt Gutenb…

26. Richard Wagner, Siegfried. The drama unfolds chiefly in a forest, a cave, a dragon's lair and a fire-encircled mountain rock, making its world mythic wilderness. Projekt Gutenb…

Because many longer narratives contain brief scenes in settlements, "setting" here means the work's dominant or structurally decisive setting; wilderness is distinguished from an inhabited or agricultural rural setting.

1. Jean Paul, Des Luftschiffers Giannozzo Seebuch. The episodes are narrated from a balloon travelling through the atmosphere, so aerial space rather than a human settlement organizes the work. Wikipedia
2. Heinrich von Kleist, Das Bettelweib von Locarno. The supernatural action is concentrated inside an isolated castle and especially within one haunted room. Wikipedia
3. Wilhelm Hauff, Die Geschichte von dem Gespensterschiff. The narrative's principal locations are the open sea and a mysteriously cursed ship. Wikipedia +1
4. Wilhelm Hauff, Die Höhle von Steenfoll. The story centres on a rocky Scottish island, its surrounding sea and a hidden coastal cave. Wikisource +1 where are gaps?

ChatGPT

The clearest gap is the 1830s, with no texts published between 1827 and 1841 in this selection.

A second, smaller gap appears in the 1870s: only one text is represented, Eine Halligfahrt (1871), followed by no further item until 1881.

Other shorter intervals are:

- 1804–1810
- 1819–1825

So the distribution's main absences are 1828–1840 and 1872–1880.

I interpret the gap as 1828–1840, particularly the empty 1830s bin. To preserve the nonurban/nonrural criterion while reaching 30 items, the list includes self-contained prose legends and mythological episodes published within collections. Dates refer to the first publication of the relevant prose version or collection volume.

Publication Years by Setting Label

ChatGPT

All 106 texts are included in the decade-level grouped plot.

- Other texts are concentrated earliest, especially in the 1810s.
- Rural texts peak in the 1840s–1850s.
- Urban texts are concentrated later, particularly from the 1880s through the 1930s.

Where are gaps for the specific labels

ChatGPT

Using the decade bins in the plot, the internal gaps are:

- Urban: no texts in the 1830s or 1860s.
- Rural: no texts in the 1820s.

Take your curiosity further
Scan to get the ChatGPT app

- Other: no texts in the 1830s.

The longest exact intervals without a publication in each category are:

Label	Longest gaps between sampled publications
Urban	1823–1839 and 1858–1877
Rural	1801–1816 and 1818–1837
Other	1826–1841, 1855–1863, and 1872–1880

There are also boundary gaps, which indicate that a label's coverage ends rather than a hole between observations: Urban begins only in 1822, Rural ends in 1918, and Other ends in 1897.
